A free-will offering will be received to help distribute literature and carry on the work of the purity department in this community.

NEXT WEEK AT THE AUDITORI-UM.

A special Easter week bill of three acts will open at this popular play-house on Monday for the first three days of the week. Because of the added expense the management had to go to in order to secure the Three Lieuph of the Spirit. ed expense the management had to go to in order to secure the Three Liebigs, the feature act for Monday, it was necessary to drop one single turn, which explains the reason for three instead of the usual four acts. But the management feels postive that this Liebig Trio will be such an exceptional attraction that it will fully overcome the loss of the fourth act, and be especially pleasing to all who see it. The act has played the biggest and hest vaudeville theaters in New York city, and in fact all over the United States and Europe, and has received most flattering notices from all the leading newspapers. It consists of two ladies and one gentleman, who introduce a musical act extremely introduce a musical act extremely original and very European, the instruments being entirely concealed, or disguised, so that the audience always wonders where the harmony is coming Next on the bill come Barret & Dunn, a couple of eccentric Irish comedians, who are sure to make a good impression and provoke many a good impression and provoke many a feugh with their new and original Irish comedy, while Lee Barth, a sing-er and yodeler of known ability, will be the last of the special attractions for Easter week. The Photoplays at this theater are improving steadily in many different ways and are causing much favorable comment.

"Northern Lights."

"Northern Lights."

The Poil Players will present for their Easter week attraction Lawrence Earbour's powerful drama of the western military posts, "Northern Lights." This will be the nineteenth week of this popular stock organization in this city, and public interest appears to be still on the increase. Next week's play will be different in every way from anything that has gone before, it being a powerful picture of active army life at the time of the Indian uprising that resulted in the Custer massacre. This massacre takes an important place in the story of "Northern Lights," although of course, nothing bearing on the famous scene is shown in the play. But characters in the drama are supposed to have been eye witnesses to the terrible scene, and it is their recounting the horrors of it that spurs the little troop of cavalry at Fort Terry, Montana, to heroic action in rescuing their commander and the women of the fort from the clutches of the Indians. The play itself deals primarily with commander and the women of the fort from the clutches of the Indians. The play itself deals primarily with the surgeon of the post. Sidney Sherwood, and his assistant, John Swiftwind, an Indian, who has been educated in an eastern college. The surgeon is experimenting with choiera germs and allows his scientific researches to lead him to trifle with human life. His wife becomes a victim, and then, overcome by remorse and fear, the doctor takes to drink and becomes infected later with the loathsome disease himself. Swiftwind takes a hand in time to save the woman, but the man dies, a victim of his own flendishness. There are several complications to the original story—an old sweetheart of the doctors and a lover of the wife's appeartor's and a lover of the wife's appear-ing to add to the details of the plot in a most puzzling manner. There is some lively comedy introduced at intervals through the action of the play and taken as a whole nothing has been soen here all season that offered so many strong acting roles for the play-ers. Some of the best work of the season is gure to be seen in this play. Cast of Characters.

BREED THEATER.

The very attractive bill at the Breed theater today includes the great story, of the worising in Mexico that occurred recently, and is a true incident. It is a powerful story, filled to the brim with exciting moments, included in which is the scene where the little Mexican lady succeeds in getting the train loaded with contraband started across the border into Mexico, before the secret service men, who have been notified of the affair, arrive. In one scene she crawls up over the tops of the cars and down between them, uncoupling the remainder of the train, compelling the dumfounded engineer to increase the speed of his engine, until the contraband, with its plucky mistress is safely over the border.

The big circus picture, entitled The Survival of the Fittest, is a strong story dealing wholly with circus life, and really teems with the atmosphere of the sawdust arena.

Eugene Calkins meets with untounded success in his fine rendition of The Palms, and an encore is necessary at each performance. The very attractive bill at the Breed at each performance.

POETRY.

THE EASTER AWAKENING . The rebirth of the Lamb of God In splenger of the sun has come; the Resurrection and the Lafe. The victory over death and tomb.

Lo, we who sleep have seen His face, And rise, wherever life may be— The brethron of the earth and air, And of the unfathomable sea.

For writ in glory, whence He came
To lead the way through death and night.
Upon our brows there shines the Name
That marks us shildren of the Light! He beckens and we follow Him Through birth and death, through death and birth.
Until the last returning spring
Shall clay the shadows of the earth!
—M. E. Buhler.

An echoing drift of organ rolls. Through gothic churchly arches. Where saints in marble aureoles. Smile as the column marches.

Fresh from the flower-hung chancel rall
Comes scent of Springtime's greening.
Gathered in valley and in dale
To whisper April's meaning.

Across the sky the steeples chime.
A message of rejoicing.
Sounding the song of Eastertime,
Our heart's new gladness voicing.

Sing out your chant of glory, Til every pink and pansy tells Once more the sweet old story!

And down the stately avenue City-scarred sons and daughters; Forward—our souls: In proud review We walk beside still waters: —Kate Masterson, in The Columbian.
